

People with a genturis are at high hereditary risk of developing cancers, which are often located in multiple organs.

In case they are diagnosed with cancer they may need different treatment and follow-up as compared to people with non-hereditary cancers.

We are a network of 50+ European expert centres. Our aim is to improve access to diagnosis, treatment and the provision of high-quality healthcare. We achieve this by:

- collaborating with other health professionals
- providing healthcare to patients
- developing evidence based guidelines
- developing patient registries and doing research
- defining health care pathways
